

Where does Barack Obama stand on Jerusalem?
It depends on which day you ask him.

His Shifting Views on Jerusalem Are Reckless

On Wednesday, Sen. Barack Obama supported an undivided Jerusalem.

On Thursday, he did not.

At the annual AIPAC Policy Conference, Sen. Obama said Jerusalem should be the undivided capital of Israel. (Haaretz.com, 5/6/08)

The very next day, Barack Obama changed his tune.

Facing criticism from the Palestinian Authority and Arab nations, Sen. Barack Obama said the future of Jerusalem would have to be negotiated by Israel and the Palestinians.

(WashingtonPost.com, 6/6/08)

In just twenty-four hours, Sen. Obama changed his position on this issue of critical importance to Israel and to Jews all over the world. Obama called his support for an undivided Jerusalem a "poor phrasing" of words. (Jerusalem Post, 7/14/08)

Obama is a gifted public speaker. He knows that words matter. The Palestinians and the Arab nations are listening to Obama's words. So must we.

Barack Obama should know Jerusalem is the capital of Israel. It must remain undivided. Undivided, not just on Wednesdays, but every day.

Thank you! Because we are highlighting these issues, membership in the Republican Jewish Coalition is growing. Log on to www.rjchq.org and join us or contribute today to advance our pro-America, pro-security, pro-economic growth issues and increase our ability to reach more Americans with our message. Paid for by the Republican Jewish Coalition.

